MARRIAGE BONDS OF POCAHONTAS COUNTY
Compiled by
James E. and Rita Wooddell

A Marriage Bond was required of each prospective groom during the thirty one year period immediately following the formation of Pocahontas County. By pledging his bond to the Governor of Virginia, the groom-to-be certified that the intended marriage would take place, unless an unforeseen circumstance prevented it, and that the parties planning to wed were legally free to do so. A second individual was required to sign the $150.00 bond as surety, a role usually filled by the father, a brother, or other relative of the bride-to-be.

From the beginning of the Colony of Virginia, marriages were by license or banns. Marriage Bonds were first required in 1660 when the Governor ceased to grant licenses, this authority having been placed in the hands of local authorities by an Act of that year. The Code of 1848 deleted the requirement for Marriage Bonds but most counties continued the practice until 1852/1853. Pocahontas County discontinued the requirement in the spring of 1852.

If a marriage was by banns, i.e., the intent to marry was published, or read, in church for three consecutive Sundays, no license or bond was required and the officiating minister reported the marriage to the County Clerk. Such marriages are recorded in the Marriage Register with the annotation, "By Publication". Marriage by banns was abolished on 18 Mar 1848.

The compilers specifically request this index NOT be photocopied or otherwise reproduced for dissemination outside the office of the County Clerk of Pocahontas County.
